President Richard C. Maclaurin this afternoon awarded degrees to 274 members of the graduating class of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at the annual commencement day exercises in Huntington hall, Rogers building, Boylston street. Friends of the seniors and students of all the other classes crowded the hall to see the most impressive spectacle the college offers during the year.

Dr. Maclaurin opened the exercises with a short speech to the class and paid a high tribute to the work that they self" kind, and that it was bound to

Address of President Maclaurin to Graduates

The address to the graduating class was then delivered by President Maclaurin, who spoke as follows:

"Among the educational principles that Edward R. Gregory, who was appointed by the late Mayor Hibbard, and John S. from the schoolhouse commission. It is method in learning and in working. Even if time permitted, this would not be the occasion to expound the doctrine of method that has been elaborated here, but one element in that doctrine is so important that it cannot well be passed over. I refer to the principle that encourages men to do things for them-selves—the "do-it-yourself-method," as it is sometimes styled.

"It is recognized clearly that men who are to be really effective must learn resourcefulness and self-reliance as speed-

For invaluable discipline that comes from mastering things for oneself and the invaluable self-knowledge that is thereby acquired. To know your limitation, what you cannot do well, is often as useful as a knowledge of your strength and

"Well, this 'do-it-yourself-method' characterizes the work here throughout the whole of a student's course. As a final example of it, each student is required to attack some problem under conditions such as prevail in the practise of his professions and to write a thesis giving an account of his solution theses are set out in the program. The theses were thereupon read, at the conclusion of which Dr. Maclaurin continued his address as follows:

The theses that have just described have been selected as representative of you have heard is, of course, only a synopsis of a few theses, enough, it is hoped, to give some idea of the scope of the work undertaken here. I feel sure that, if you had time to examine all the theses, you could not fail to be impressed by the splendid opportunities of public service presented to these young men who are about to graduate. Here are more than 270 men who for four years at least have been subjected to the severest training.

"They have breathed an atmosphere of science, and some appreciation of its spirit and its method cannot fail to have been instilled into them. Accompanied by Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, Mr. Roosevelt arrived at Oxford at 10:15 a. m. and was immediately escorted to the ancient city hall where the own council received him. In a brief talk to the council, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I am convinced by my reception today that real liberty must have been original in the ancient English cities. My rip to England was primarily due to the invitation of Vice-Chancellor Warren of Oxford. In the vernacular of my own ountry I have had a sufficiently lively ime in the last three months."

He was next conducted to Christ Colege and thence to Magdalen College. While much of Mr. Roosevelt's lecture was an academic discussion of his theme, he found numerous opportunities for discoursing on his hobby of the necessity of retaining the virile fighting man as the foundation of a nation that would stand. #### FRESHMEN TOO SLOW

SYRACUSE, N. Y .- The Syracuse University crews are now putting forth their best efforts on Onondaga lake before they leave for Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on Thursday. The intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson comes this year on June 25, one week earlier than last year, which gives the Syracuse crews two weeks work on the scene of the races before the time.

The varsity eight is regarded by the students here as one of the weakest ever turned out. But in spite of this, they easily defeated the strong Detroit Boat Club Decoration day in good time, and they gave the exceptionally strong crew of the United States Naval Academy a hard race, losing by a quarter of a length.

Coach James A. Ten Eyck has strengthened the prevailing opinion of the erew by a sweeping change, immediately ater the successful race with Detroit. Throughout the season, the coach had the men arranged in the varsity.

Coach Ten Eyck has shifted Captain Shimer to 4, placing Dodge at 2 in the four oared. Grim '12 went in at 6. Ray Peterson '10 has been dropped from a place in either boat and H. R. Topping '12 took his place at bow of the varsity

All-Stroke Plan - Course Not Yet Selected.

NEW YORK-At the annual meeting of the Eastern Professional Golfers Association, held at the Astor house Monday, it was decided that the next championship tournament should be at match play instead of the usual all-stroke plan. The program will call for three eights. The tournament will be held July 26 and 27 and those making the first eight will qualify for the title, and the other two divisions will continue on for money prizes. The selection of a place to hold the tournament has narrowed down between the Wykagyl Country Club and the Hackensack Golf-Club.

Such well-known performers as Alex Smith, Willie Anderson, George Sargent, Isaac Mackie and "Nipper" Campbell will fight it out at hole play, so the tourna-ment will become far more interesting than anything of a similar nature ever attempted in this country.

The annual election was held Monday and resulted as follows: President, Jack Hobens; vice-president, George Strath; secretary, Herbert Barker; treasurer, Dave Hunter; executive committee, Jack Jones, C. A. W. Fox, Herbert Strong, Harry Simpson, James Maiden, Alex Finlay and Dave Ogilvie.

Had Philadelphia won Monday a fairly fast clip.

Coach Kennedy ordered the row chiefly for the purpose of developing endurance and especially to try out Wallis, the stroke who had been out of the boat for three weeks until Saturday. Wallis stood the pull very well. The last half mile of the course was rowed at a fairly high stroke, and the crew covered the distance in 2m. 32s. Considering the conditions, which were only fair, this was fast time. The freshman eight was given a three and a half mile pull with plenty of coaching. The crew is improving rapidly and is likely to be heard from as the best freshman eight that has come out of New Haven in several years.

There is more good material for the future in this boat than in all the Yale freshman eights of the past four years. They have also had the advantage of more coaching by John Kennedy than any freshman eight of recent years.

The varsity fours were given a short pull under Kennedy's eye. These fours have made considerable improvement First Time Team Has De-

CREW BIG SHAKEUP

Sargent Put Back at Stroke, Where He Rowed in 1908 -Metcalf Is Promoted to Boat.

OTHER CHANGES

Dissatisfied with the showing made by the Harvard varsity crew in its two-mile race with Cornell on the Charles river Decoration day, Coach Wray sprang big surprise when the men took to the water Monday in their first practise since last Thursday by shifting nearly every man in the boat.

The greatest change was made when S. A. Sargent '10, who stroked the varsity crew to victory against Yale in 1908 but was replaced by R. W. Cutler in 1909, was taken from 2, where he has been rowing all this spring, and put in his former seat. Sargent was one of the best oarsmen in the Harvard shell in 1908 but lost his form in 1909 and was sent in to stroke the four which defeated Yale. He has been rowing in good shape this year and if he can continue his good work, will probably stroke against Yale. Only two of the men retained their old seats. L. Withington, Jr., remained at 4 and Whitney at bow. These two there is little chance of their being shifted.

Cutler was moved back to 6 and E. C. Bacon was moved up to 7, taking Captain Waid's place, he going back to 5 in place of Bacon. Newton, who early in the winter was a most promising candidate for stroke and who has been rowing at 6 was moved back to 2, where Sargent has been rowing.

Metcalf, who has been doing good work n the second crew, was the only new man to be taken into the first boat. He was given Balch's seat at 3, the latter going to the second boat.

The work of the crew in its new order was fully as good as could be expected for the first day. At the start the boat was rather unsteady, the men failing to get the proper rhythm; but later in the practise they became more accustomed to their new places and showed considerable improvement. Sargent sets a stroke considerably shorter than Cut-

While it is not believed that the present order will remain unchanged, it is to leave for Camp Perry, Ohio, for the BRITISH POLO TEAM probable that some of the men will continue as now seated. It is expected that TO PLAY IN U. S. Neltow will be tried out before the crew leaves for New London Sunday. The

"In order, however, that each may have the benefit of a speedy determination whether or not its proposed increases in rates are justifiable, provision should be made by Congress to vest the interstate commerce commission with jurisdiction over such questions as soon as

"In the Senate amendment to section 13 of the act to regulate commerce, contained in H. R. 17,536, the interstate commerce commission is empowered immediately upon the filing of a proposed increase in rates, of its own motion or upon complaint, to enter upon an investigation and a determining of the justice and reasonableness of such increase, and in case it deem it expedient, to suspend the operation thereof for a period specified in the section to enable it to complete such investigations. That bill, however, provides that the act shall take effect and be in force only from and after the expiration of 60 days after its passage. "This provision, if allowed to remain in the bill, would enable carriers, between the time of enactment of the bill and the time of its taking effect, to file increases in rates which would become effective at the expiration of 30 days and remain in effect and be collected from the public during the pendency of proceedings to review them, whereas if the bill be made to take effect immediately such investigation will have to upon to pay the increased rate.

After the second act, when the whole company had been called out individually and collectively, Mr. Craig led Mr. Hansel to the middle of the stage, then graciously left him there to take to the greeting of the house.

Mr. Meek made the most of the great part of Bob Acres, keeping the audience in continual laughter while he was on the stage. Especially fine was the scene of the preparation for the duel, Hansel's Sir Lucius, Ludicrous, too were his squeals and absurd fright regarding the challenge in the scene where Bob, himself afraid to pick up the letter, calls his servant cowardly for not daring to touch it. David was almost a star part as played by Mr. Walker. His vacuous face might have been painted by Grace Wiederseim, and his doleful moanings for the quiet life in the country were comical beyond description.

Miss Ryan made every one of her "derangements of epitaphs" tell with her incisive speech of the older school of playing. She illustrated the part with a wealth of traditional "business." George Hassell achieved complete success with the part of Sir Anthony, making the most of his own scenes along lines slightly more acid than the mellow atmosphere generally adopted, and doing much to "point" the lines of the other characters by facial byplay.

Mr. Craig made a handsome figure as Captain Absolute, and Miss Young was Lydia to the life in manner and appearance. Both were a little wobbly in their lines, but this will have worn off by today. In their pantomime both displayed their mastery of their art, and to this many of the delightful moments in the play were due. The others made the most of their slight opportunities.

Miss Louise Le Baron was also a favorite in the sole of Pitti Sing and was made to repeat "Going to Marry Yum Yum" several times. Miss Arnold as Katisha did the part in the conventional way, but did it well.

Naturally, there are always certain songs in the "Mikado" which have to be repeated and Monday night was no exception to this rule. As knowledge increases our wisdom is often turned into foolishness, and many of the phenomena of evolution which seemed clearly explicable to the learned master of science who founded these lectures, to us nowadays seem far less satisfactorily explained. The scientific men of most note now differ widely in their estimates of the relative parts played in evolution by natural selection, by mutation, by the inheritance of acquired characteristics; and we study their writings with a growing impression that there are forces at work which our blinded eyes wholly fail to apprehend; and where this is the case, the part of wisdom is to say that we believe we have such and such partial explanations, but that we are not warranted in saying that we have the whole explanation.

planations, but that we are not warranted in saying that we have the whole explanation.

As in biology, so in human history, a new form may result from the specialization of a long-existing and hitherto very slowly changing generalized or non-specialized form; as, for instance, when a barbaric race from a variety of causes suddenly develops a more complex cultivation and civilization. This is what occurred, for instance, in western Europe during the centuries of the Teutonic and later the Scandinavian ethnic overflows from the north. All the modern countries of western Europe are descended from the states created by these northern invaders. We can rightly use the phrase "a new people" in speaking of Canadians or Australians, Americans or Afrikanders. But we use it in an entirely different sense from that in which we use it when speaking of such communities as those founded by the Northmen and their descendants during that period of astonishing growth which saw the descendants of the Norse sea-thieves conquer and transform Normandy, Sicily and the British lisiands; we use it in an entirely different sense from that in which we use it when speaking of the new states that grew up around Warsaw, Kief, Novgorod, and Moscow, as the wild savages of the steppes and the marshy forests struggled haltingly and stumbilingly upward to become builders of cities and to form stable governments.

The kingdoms of Charlemagne and Alfred were "new," compared with the empire on the Bosphorus; they were also in every way different; their lines of ancestral descent had nothing in common with those of the polyglot realm which spring direct from old nations. Brazil, the Argentine, the United States, are all "new" nations, compared with the haritons of Europe; but, with whatever changes in detail, their civilization is nevertheless of the general European type, as shown in Portugal, Spain and England. atrophy, then the nation has lost what no material prosperity can offset.

The phenomen of national growth and decay, both those which can and those which cannot be explained, have been peculiarly in evidence during the four centuries that have gone by since the discovery of America and the rounding of the Cape of Good Hope. These have been the four centuries of by far the most intense and constantly accelerating rapidity of movement and development that the world has yet seen. The movement has covered all the fields of human activity. It has witnessed an altogether unexampled spread of civilized mankind over the world, as well as an altogether unexampled advance in man's dominion' over nature; and this, together with a literary and artistic activity to be matened in but one previous epoch. This period of extension and development has been that of one race, the so-called white race, or, to speak more accurately, the group of peoples living in Europe who undoubtedly have a certain kinship of blood, who profess the Christian religion and trace back their culture to Greece and Rome.

The memories of men are short, and it is easy to forget how brief is this period of unquestioned supremacy of the so-called white race. It is but a thing of yesterday. During the thousand years which went before the opening of this era of European supremacy, the attitude of Asia and Africa, of Hun and Mongol, Turk and Tartar, Arab and Moor, had on the whole been that of successful aggression against Europe, More than a century passed after the voyages of Columbus before the mastery in war began to pass from the Asiatic to the European. During that time European advance gathered momentum, until at the present time peoples of Europea not pass from the Asiatic to the European. During that time Europe produced no generals or conquerors able to stand comparison with Selim and Solyman, Baber and Akbar.

National Divergence

The differences between these "new" American and these "old" European nations are not as great as those which separate the "new" nations one from another and the "old" hations one from another. There are in each case very real differences between the new and the old nation—differences both for good and for evil; but in each case there is the same ancestral history to reckon with, the same type of civilization, with its attendant benefits and shortcomings and, after the ploneer stages are passed, the problems to be solved, in spite of superficial differences, are in their essence the same; they are those that confront all civilized peoples, not those that confront peoples struggling from barbarism into civilization.

front all civilized peoples, not those that confront peoples struggling from barbarism into civilization.

We are not yet in a position to dognatize as to the permanence or evanescence of the various strains of blood that go to make up every civilized nationality; but it is reasonably certain that the blood of the old Roman still flows through the veins of the modern Italian; and though there has been much intermixture, from many different foreign scurees—from foreign conquerors and from foreign slaves—yet it is probable that the Italian type of today finds 'ts dominant ancestral type in the ancient Latin. As for the culture, the civilization of Rome, this is even more true. It has suffered a complete transformation, partly by natural growth, partly by absorption of totally allen elements, such as a Semitic religion, and certain Teutonic governmental and social customs; but the process was not one of extinction, but one of growth and transformation, both from within and by the accretion of outside elements. In France and Spain the inheritance of Latin blood is small; but the Roman culture which was forced on these countries has been tenaciously retained by them throughout all their subsequent ethnical and political changes, as the basis on which their civilizations have been built.

Moreover, the permanent spreading of Roman influence was not limited to Europe. It has extended to and over half of that new world which was not even dreamed of during the thousand years of brilliant life of Pagan Rome. This new world was discovered by one Italian, and its mainland first reached and named by another; and in it, over a territory many times the size of Trajan's empire, the Spaniah, French and Portuguese adventurers founded, beside the St. Lawrence and the Amazon, along the fianks of the Andes and in the shadow of the snow-capped volcanoes of Mexico, from the Rio Grande to the Strait in their blood, are the lines being of the saident Latin civilization. When we speak of the disappearance, the passing away, of the great phenomenon of mankind-has been the growth of the English-speaking peoples and their spread over the world's waste spaces.

Comparison is often made between the Empire of Britain and the Empire of Rome is of course the more important, simply because the nations of Europe and their offshoots in other continents trace back their culture either to the earlier Rome by the Tiper or the later Rome by the Bosphorus. The Empire of Rome is the most stupendous fact in lay history; no empire later in time can be compared with it. But this is merely another way, of saying that the nearer the source the more important becomes any deflection of the stream's current. Absolutely, comparing the two empires one with the other in point of actual schievement, and disregarding the immensely increased effect on other civilizations which inhered in the older empire because it antedated the younger by a couple of thousand years, there is little to choose between them as regards the wide and abounding interest and importance of their careers.

between them has regards the wide and abounding interest and importance of their careers.

In the world of antiquity each great empire rose when its predecessor had already crumbled. By the time that Rome loomed large over the horizon of history, there were left for her to contend with only decaying civilizations and raw barbarisms. When she conquered Pyrrhus, she strove against the strength of but one of the many fragments into which Alexander's kingdom had fallen. When she conquered Carthage, she overthrew a foe against whom for two centuries the single Greek city of Syracuse had contended on equal terms; it was not the sepoy armies of the Carthaginian plutocracy, but the towering, genius of the House of Barca, which rendered the struggle forever memorable, it was the distance and the desert, rather than the Parthian horse-bowman, that set bounds to Rome in the east; and on the north her advance was curbed by the vast reaches of marshy woodland, rather than by the tall barbarians who dwelt therein.

tion to nation from civilization to civilization, throughout all recorded time, from the dim years before history dawned, down to the biazing splendor of this teeming century of ours. It dropped from the hand of the coward and the sluggard, of the man wrapped in luxury or love of ease, the man whose soul was eaten away by self-indulgence; it has been kept alight only by those who were mighty-of heart and cunning of hand. What they worked, whether in the realm of the mid or the realm of the body. If their work was good, if what they achieved was of substance, then high success was really theirs. In the first part of this lecture I drew certain analogies between what had occurred to forms of animal life through the procession of the ages on this planet, and what has occurred and is occurring to the great artificial civilizations which have gradually spread over the world's surface during the thousands of years that have elapsed since cities of temples and palaces first rose beside the Nile and the Euphrates, and the harbors of Minoan Crete bristled with the masts of the Aegan craft. But of course the parallel is true only in the roughest and most general way. Moreover, even between the civilizations of ancient times there are differences so profound that we must be cautious in drawing any conclusions for the present based on what has happened in the past.

Advance in Ethics

Advance in Ethics

Advance in Ethics

While freely admitting all of our follies and weaknesses of today, it is yet mere perversity to refuse to realize the incredible advance that has been made in ethical standards. I do not believe that there is the slightest necessary connection between any weakening of virile force and this advance in the moral standard, this growth of the sense of obligation to one's neighbor and of reluctance to do that neighbor wrong. We need have scant patience with that silly cynicism which insists that kindliness of character only accompanies weakness of character only accompanies weakness of character. On the contrary, just as in private life many of the men of strongest character are the very men of loftiest and most exalted morality, so I believe that in national life as the ages go by we shall find that the permanent national types will more and more tend towards those in which, while the intellect stands high, character stands higher; in which rugged strength and courage, rugged capacity to resist wrongful aggression by others will go hand in hand with a lofty scorn of doing wrong to others. This is the type of Timoleon, of Hampden, of Washington and Lincoln. These were as good men, as disinterested and unselfish men, as ever served a state; and they were also as strong men as ever founded or saved a state. Surely such examples prove that there is nothing Utopian in our effort to combine justice and strength in the same nation. The really high civilizations must themselves supply the antidote to the self-indulgence and love of ease which they tend to produce.

Every modern civilized nation has many and terrible problems to solve within its own borders, problems that arise not merely from juxtaposition of poverty and riches, but especially from the self-consciouses of both poverty and riches. But especially from the self-consciouses of both poverty and riches. But especially from the self-consciouses of both poverty and riches. But especially from the self-consciouses of both poverty and riches. But

The only effective way to help any man is to help him to help himself; and the worst lesson to teach him is that he can be permanently helped at the expense of some one else. True liberty shows itself to best advantage in protecting the rights of others, and especially of minorities. Privilege should upt be tolerated because it is to the advantage of a minority, nor yet because it is to the advantage of a majority. No doctrinaire theories of vested rights or freedom of contract can stand in the way of our cutting out abuses from the body politic. Just as little can we afford to follow the doctrinaires of an impossible—and incidentally of a highly undesirable—social revolution which, in destroying individual rights (including property rights) and the family, would destroy the two chief agents in the advance of mankind, and the two chief reasons why either the advance or the preservation of mankind is worth while.

It is an evil and a dreadful thing to be callous to sorrow and suffering, and blind to our duty to do all things possible for the betterment of social conditions. But it is an unspeakably foolish thing to strive for this betterment by means so destructive that they would leave no social conditions to better. In dealing with all these social problems, with the intimate relations of the family, with wealth in private use and business use, with labor, with poverty, the one prime necessity is to remember that, though hardness of heart is a great evil, it is no greater an evil than softness of lead.

But in addition to these problems the most intimate and important of all which to a larger or less degree affect all the modern nations somewhat alike, we of the great nations that have expanded, that are now in complicated relations with one another and with alien races, have special problems and special duties of our own. You belong to a nation which possesses the greatest empire upon which the sun has ever shone. I belong to a national dry of a great power. But there are evrule problems which our standards s

Uplift Alien Races

The other type of duty is the international duty, the duty owed by one nation to another. I hold that the laws of morality which should govern individuals in their dealings one with the other are just as binding concerning nations in their dealings one with the other. The application of the moral law must be different in the two cases, because in one case it has, and in the other it has not, the sanction of a civil law with force behind it. The individual can depend for his rights upon the courts, which themselves derive their force from the police power of the state. The nation can depend upon nothing of the kind; and therefore, as things are now, it is the highest duty of the most advanced and freest peoples to keep themselves in such a state of readiness as to forbid to any barbarism or despotism the hope of arresting the progress of the world by striking down the nations that lead in that progress.

It would be foolish indeed to pay heed to the unwise persons who desire disagrament.

It would be foolish indeed to pay heed to It would be foolish indeed to pay heed to the unwise persons who desire disarmament to be begun by the very peoples who, of all others, should not be left helpless before any possible foe. But we must reprobate quite as strongly both the leaders and the peoples who practise or encourage or condone, aggression and iniquity by the strong at the expense of the weak. We should tolerate lawlessness and wickedness neither by the weak nor by the strong; and both tolerate lawlessness and wickedness neither by the weak nor by the strong; and both weak and strong we should in return treat with scrupulous fairness. The foreign policy of a great and self-respecting country should be conducted on exactly the same plane of honor, of insistence upon one's own rights and of respect for the rights of others, as when a brave and honorable man is dealing with his fellows. Permit me to support this statement out of my own experience. For nearly eight years I was the head of a great nation and orable man is dealing with his fellows. Permit me to support this statement out of my own experience. For nearly eight years I was the head of a great nation and charged especially with the conduct of its foreign policy; and during those years I took no action with reference to any other people on the face of the earth that I would not have felt justified in taking as an individual in dealing with other individuals. I believe that we of the great civilized nations of today have a right to feel that long careers of achievement lie before our several countries. To each of us is vouchsafed the honorable privilege of doing his part, however small, in that work. Let us strive hardily for success, even if by so doing we risk failure, spurning the poorer souls of small endeavor who know neither failure nor success. Let us hope that our own blood shall continue in the fand, that our children and children's children to endless generations shall arise to take our places and play a mighty and dominant part in the world. But whether this be denied or granted by the years we shall not see, let at least the satisfaction be ours that we have carried onward the lighted torch in our own day and generation.

Stocks in Hands of Buyers Reported to Be Small and Situation Presents a More Favorable Appearance.

MARKET QUIET NOW

The shoe trade as a whole is dull, and the manufacturers seem to have made up their minds to patiently await the arrival of the buyers, who are due to arrive here about July 1, when all parts of the country will be represented. Their stay during the warm season is considerably longer than their winter visit, which gives the manufacturers a better opportunity of meeting about all they desire to, and thereby become familiar with the different requirements of the several

Although the visiting buyers will devote most of their attention to completing their sample lines for the spring and summer trade of 1911, there is always account. Stocks in the hands of the buyers were a little below normal, more ... 15% 15% 15% 15% attributable to conservative buying than to actual demand from the retailers.

This fact gives a healthy appearance to the situation, for it is an assurance which always accompany an attempt to

to occur nowadays as in former years, for today shoes are made to fit the price demanded by the buyers, and the rivalry between the manufacturers is to produce the most desirable shoes at the prices set by the buyers, and as they differ but slightly in that regard it is then the style and the workmanship which influence the buyers in placing their orders.

Of course, the struggle for business is always apparent, especially where large taken at cost have caused in the past, do not bite at the tempting bait as they have in the past, for all admit that an ordinary sized order showing a profit is more to be desired, therefore bigging rices is a thing seldom heard of today

That the coming advent of buyers will find a dull market is not defined, but they will also find a firm one is equally the first of t 51 1/2 assured. Salesmen who sell the retailers direct are now all in from the road, while some report trade below what they expected, others are well pleased with the result of their trip, and some were found who report an increase over any previous season.

Therefore investigation brings this con clusion, that the shoe business is likely to take a start for the better, and the depressing atmosphere of doubt and worry will disappear.

The arrangements for the shoe convention to be held July 11-17 referred to in a previous article have now reached a stage of completion. The outing with its shore dinner will take place at Salem Willows on July 14, and as President Taft's summer home is but a short distance away from there, it is the hope of the committee that the President will be there.

If the attendance of a President, Governor, senators and other distinguished unsurpassed will be assured. A steamer will be chartered to convey the people from Boston direct to the Willows and return, thereby adding to the occasion an ocean voyage which is always de lightful to visitors and home folks alike. Much interest has already been awakened in the different events so far formulated, and it is hoped that the shee and leather trade will practically close their different places of business on the day point lower in per cent to gross. The of the picnic and join in making this total operating ratio was 50.23 per cent affair the greatest outing which the New England manufacturers and merchants ever participated in of a similar character.

The sole leather market as a whole has been quite fortunate in having a foreign outlet, which has been unusually active the past six months, in consequence of which no accumulation of stocks is noticeable and the firmness in annual dullness being the prime cause, prices which has been the case for some still there is no disposition on the part time back is still maintained.

NEW HAVEN'S BIG REVENUE GAIN

For the 10 months ended April 30 last gross earnings of the New Haven were lose to $50,000,000, an increase of more than $5,000,000, equal to 11.42 per cent over the figures for the corresponding period in 1909. At this rate it is very evident that the company will show a much larger total for the full 12 months than was reported last year, for with onths' operations yet to be reported for; gross is now but $4,500,000 less than for the fiscal year 1909.

Freight revenue was responsible for more than $3,000,000 of this gain, while assenger revenue advanced more than $1.650,000. In this connection it is well to bear in mind that the company has already advanced many of its passenger rates, but the increase in freight rates will not go into effect until after the close of the current fiscal year. Therefore, while freight and passenger revenues for the 10 months reported show gains of 13.81 per cent and 8.75 per cent. respectively, it is more than likely that this ratio will not be maintained until June 30 next.

Despite the increased traffic which the New Haven has had to handle during the year and the fact that wages in many departments have been materially advanced, it is noteworthy that the cost of conducting transportation has been relatively reduced.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN GARY. GARY, Ind .- Building operations in the eity of Gary now under or to be started shortly amount to $3,500,000. This is exclusive of the millions being spent by the United States Steel Corporation on its gigantic plants in the vicinity. No other city in the central states, with the exception of Chicago, is enjoying such a phenomenal building growth.

ST. LOUIS LUMBER TRAFFIC.

ST. LOUIS-For the five months end ST. LOUIS—For the five months ending with May, St. Louis, which is the leading distributing center for rough lumber in the Mississippi valley, has received 33 per cent more carloads of lumber freight than in the corresponding months of 1900. A total of 79,892 cars were received, compared with 59,737 for the like period in 1909.

Thomas G. Plant of Jamaica Plain one of the 10 principal shoe manufacturers in the United States, confirmed today the report that he has organized the Wonder Worker Shoe Machinery Company for the purpose of placing on the market, in opposition to the United Shoe Machinery Company, a complete series of shoe machines. Mr. Plant stated:

"Six years ago I first undertook to investigate the patents and new leases of the United Shoe Machinery Company, and, after securing all necessary infor mation, proceeded to devote time and money in developing a line of shoe machinery that will not only save the shoe trade millions of dollars in royalties now paid to the shoe machinery trust, but will save millions of dollars per annum by economies in the use of materials and labor and at the same time greatly improve the quality of shoemaking.

"To produce good work with the machines put out by the Shoe Machinery Trust absolutely requires skilled work men. Our machines solve the great problem of today, viz., to improve the quality of fine shoe making at the lowest possible cost. We also can enable the mak-Str Parisian (Br), Hains, Glasgow, 11 ers of medium priced shoes to turn out only by makers of fine shoes."

NEW STREET PLAN CAUSED BY AUTOS

An entirely new plan from that here tofore used is now being carried out by the public works department of Melrose in laying out new streets and in repair ing old ones. The advent of the automobile has caused the change.

Instead of having the corners of intersecting streets almost sharp right angles, the new plan is to round off the corners with as wide a sweep as possible. The relaying of Green street is being carried out on these lines and it is also planned to make similar changes in Main, Upham and Franklin streets. The building of the roadways is also materially changed by raising the grades to a much higher distance in the center of the streets to prevent the gouging out of the streets when taken at high speed by an automobile.

Under the law of Mexico the national hymn may be played only on occasions when the chief executive of the nation or the Governor of a state is present. The circular says the hymn may be played in September at all solemn cerenonies, but the interpretation of the word "solemn" will be left to the various local military authorities.

Residents of cities and small towns where the President or Governors are rarely, if ever, seen will therefore have the only opportunity given them in years to hear the inspiring national hymn played in public.

Park

Central Park, New York, is to be Illuminated with 1477 electric lamps in place of the 400 gasoline lamps now in use. Three reasons have been given for this change. In the first place, the park is insufficiently illuminated at present; secondly, the use of gasoline has resulted Daniel Webster on Morning in the destruction of grass around each lamp post, due to dripping or leakage; and finally, the lamplighters have worn paths across the turf from one lamp to another. The use of electricity will not 'require unsightly overhead wires, as the circuits will be contained in armored cables placed underground.-Exchange.

SERMONS IN TREES

In order that dignity and solemnity THAT spirit which suffices quiet hearts, centennial next September, military stone on which the dull March sun shines, comes forth to the poor and hungry and to such as are of simple "If thou fill thy brain with Boston

Emerson knew the direct and simple spell of sere grass and rough brown bark; the brusque straight tree trunk contrasted here with the stony fortunes of the meandering stream beyond would have told him the secret of its hold on the imagination. For this is an attrac-tive picture, though to define why it seems beautiful would be difficult indeed. There be artists they tell who have all the laws of proportion and harmony so pat that they may peep and botanize about every one of nature's landscapes-in their myriad charm no two ever alike-and tell us why the camera's eye catches here an impressive sermon in the rough naturalness out of doors and again reads no lesson in the New Way to Light Central chance grouping of these forms. Do we like this tree because it goes up and up, and intimates that it reaches the sky beyond the frame?

For there is a fundamental artistic reason in these things even as there are moral principles back of what we feel to be seemly and gracious conduct in mankind.

The following extracts are from a letter written by Daniel Webster in Richmond, Va., at 5 a. m., April 29, 1847: "It is morning; and a morning sweet and fresh and delightful. Everybody knows the morning in its metaphorical sense, applied to so many objects and on so many occasions. The . . . strength and beauty of early years lead us to call that period 'the morning of life.' Of a lovely young woman we say, she is 'bright as the morning' and no one doubts why Lucifer is called 'son of the morning.' "But the morning itself, few people inhabitants of cities, know anything about. Among all our good people of Boston, not one in a thousand sees the sun rise once a year. They know nothing of the morning. . . With them morning is not a new issuing of light; a new bursting forth of the sun; . . . it is only a part of the domestic day, belonging to breakfas, to reading the newspapers, answering notes, sending the children to school and giving orders for dinner. The first faint streaks of light purpling the east, which the lark springs ip to greet, and the deeper and deeper coloring into orange and red, till at length 'the glorious sun is seen, regent of the day'-this they never enjoy, for this they never see.

"Beautiful descriptions of the morning abound in all languages; but they are the strongest, perhaps, in those of the east. . . . King David speaks of taking to himself 'the wings of the morning.' This is highly poetical and beautiful. The 'wings of the morning' are the beams of the rising sun. Rays of light are wings. It is thus said that the son of righteousness shall arise 'with healing in his wings'-a rising sun, which shall scatter light . . . and joy throughout the universe. Milton has fine descriptions of morning, but not so many as Shakespeare, from whose writings pages of the most beautiful images, all founded on the glory of the morning, might be

How to Divide With the Birds

In June the fruitgrower begins to enjoy some of the rewards of his labor. He can have better strawberries than money will often buy—those of the highest quality, as Marshall, William Belt, etc., that have been left on the plants until they are fully ripe, and are sweet and luscious. If the strawberry plants have not been well mulched, place green grass or lawn clippings between the rows, using litter that will keep the berries clean and retain moisture. Later in the month the cherries begin to ripen! It is cheaper to feed the birds on mul-berries than on cherries, so plant a few mulberry trees in the cherry orchard. If the birds will only come and stay with us we can afford to plant sufficient fruit for both them and ourselves-Garden Magazine.

There is an anecdote in J. A. Hammerton's "George Meredith in Anecdote and Criticism," which hints at the possibility of the great novelist's fountain of talk being sealed at times. A lady who had friends in Surrey who were on terms of some intimacy with the novelist was greatly charmed on one occasion when visiting there to find that Meredith was to be one of the guests at dinner. She prepared herself for a rich ingathering of his celebrated flowers of witty talk. But he was singularly silent throughout the visit, and the only Meredithian phrase the lady could carry away with her was his remark, when reaching across his neighbor for the salt: "Excuse the picnic stretch."-Kansas City Star.

A boy in Philadelphia has made what is perhaps the biggest kite ever raised, and St. Nicholas for June has some interesting photographs of it. It requires an especially trong line, wound on a reel, to fly it.

Kite flying has for some time been a great interest to grown up men, reminding the boys perhaps of the picture they have seen of the sedate men of China flying kites with all the eagerness of boys. All kinds of useful observations about air currents have been taken by kite flying. Photographs are taken. too, by sending cameras up on kites rigged with strings. Armistice Now, Settlement Later

THE upshot of the conference between the President and representatives of the Western Trunk Line Association yesterday, in essence, is that hostilities have been suspended that the government and the transportation companies may have ample time to consider calmly whether they ever should have been begun. Pending imminent legislation in Congress, it is highly questionable whether the railroads were not inopportune, and practically courting trouble, in advancing their rates, and it is equally questionable whether the proceedings taken by the government to enjoin this action were not impulsive and precipitate beyond the bounds of dignity and prudence.

For the present the situation is relieved, although the effect of the shock will not soon wear off. Attorney-General Wickersham's action, both in method and intent, was contrary to the popular impression of the Taft administration's methods. These had been up to this time conservative; the injunction proceedings were of a decidedly radical character.

It is no defense of the policy pursued by the railroads to say that the proceedings undertaken to check it were unwise and dangerous. The railroads took a course which simply invited interference, sharp and positive, although it would have been directed against them much more effectually through the medium of quiet and regular court procedure.

The armistice agreed upon at Washington yesterday extends into the future far enough to enable both parties to the controversy. to proceed to a final settlement under the terms of the new railroad law. This law enlarges in some important particulars the powers of the interstate commerce commission; and spectacular, disturbing processes, and wholly unnecessary appeals to political prejudices and passions will be avoided if the interstate commerce commission shall be permitted to perform its proper functions in an orderly fashion. The railroad problem is too far-reaching a public question, involves too many millions of money and too many hundreds of thousands of workers, to be debated, much less decided, under excitement.

ALTHOUGH Washington officials have been informed that the young American taken prisoner at Bluefields is assured of fair treatment by the Madriz government at Nicaragua, the offense of which he is accused would be looked upon as being more than a youthful prank had it been committed against this government.

THE action of the board of estimate, made possible by an amendment to the state constitution and recent legislation at Albany, in setting apart a credit of $44,000,000 for new subway construction in New York city, makes the way clear for the preliminary work of advertising for and passing upon bids. This follows a prolonged struggle, first, to reach a satisfactory understanding with the Interborough or other private interests, and, second, failing in this, to clarify the situation so that the city might go into subway construction entirely on its own account. Throughout the controversy between the city and private interests it has been reiterated by the latter over and over again that the public does not know its wants, or, knowing, is not capable itself of supplying them. Only some private corporation, it has been held, especially organized and equipped for the purpose, is competent to recognize the public's needs and to provide for them. A contention of this character might have been taken as a matter of course a few years ago, but in these days when the public in so many places, and in so many ways, is serving itself, not merely experimentally, but successfully, the contention is promptly challenged, and, if persisted in, becomes offensive.

Building

It became offensive in New York city, and if there were not countless other reasons behind its purpose to bring this enterprise to a successful conclusion, that of vindicating New York intelligence and demonstrating its right to be called self-governing in the highest degree would be inspiring enough for the New York public.

THE new $20,000,000 dry goods combine that has been organized to operate department stores in a chain of cities in the central West and Northwest will no doubt perform its greatest service to the public if it will devise a system whereby customers can find the articles they are looking for without having to go "four aisles over and in the annex."

Canada and Immigration

THE action of the British colonial office in protesting against the present regulations in Canada and asking for a change of some of their provisions, while it is a question that of itself affects Canada only, nevertheless reminds us that there are some governments that prefer themselves to fix terms on which immigrants shall enter their territory rather than that those terms be fixed by others. Canada has said officially that it wishes to have each immigrant land with a certain sum of money. Whether the attitude of Canada be a selfish one or not is for others to determine, but at all events we can agree that a selfish attitude is no better for a government than for an individual. Nevertheless, the question cannot remain unasked, How great is the duty of a government to admit to its territory those that will probably become its citizens, certainly claim the protection of its laws and institutions, and only possibly add to its well-being, moral and material? The question is being asked more and more in this country and most carefully perhaps by those of most responsibility and patriotism that seek always to do what is right and to be guided by justice to their fellow man.

It is for this reason that in looking at Canada's action we should bear in mind that it is a younger country than this, with as many resources but less developed, and that for this reason its strenuous effort must be directed toward making a population of citizens that in every way shall be a sure foundation for future building. Can we in this country effectively argue that we are in much better case?

Our power of amalgamation has doubtless been very great, but it " has been through what the immigrant has found here, not what he has brought. It might be matter of debate whether a man become completely saturated with the instinct of constitutional government in a period of five years; not that constitutional government is not the best and that every man has not a right to its guarantees and its protection, but such government must be upheld by a developed tradition and that tradition is developed by education and education is a matter of time, practise, labor and self-denial. It is at all times open to the voters to insert in the constitution a provision that all citizens be born with the right to do problems of invariantive analysis, but the instructor would have to be called in. We do not speak of the education that is meant by book-learning but that moral balance which comes of a systematic acquaintance with the practise of public duty, that public duty commonly called living, whereby each man learns his obligations to his neighbor.

It is a question to be asked in all solemnity and calmness whether out of a spirit of kindness and broadness most to be commended in themselves we have not lost sight of the future yet always present rights of the country, and have in a spirit of national thoughtlessness substituted insensibly for the reasonable and patent duty of charity the work of doing for other nations what for their own interests and ours as well it is their clear obligation to effect.

EMIL SEIDEL, socialist mayor of Milwaukee, in declaring that monopolies are labor saving devices and are quite necessary, does not forget to add that it is the monopolists that are in need of reforming and regulating.

American Interests in China

THE renewed rumors about American participation in the Hankow Szechuen railway loan raise once more the question of how much or how little such participation can introduce a political element in the relation between the United States and China on the one hand and the other nations interested in China's finance on the other. Could the relation remain purely commercial or financial, the situation would become much simpler, and that it may do so must be the wish of all that care for the peace of nations. But supposing that there need be no speculation on this subject and that we disregard the possible future, we cannot shut our eyes to the imperative necessity for the erection of such a diplomatic body as shall by its permanence and its training insure a continuity of policy and practise in our foreign affairs as shall inure to the benefit of the merchants and financiers of this country. We cannot pretend that we have such a body at present; the quick succession of American representatives at foreign courts and consulates must be about as impressive as the film of a moving picture show to the foreigner who knows that his tenure of office will be measured by his professional attainments and good performance. What effect such a sight can have on an oriental people, especially one of great pride and very conservative tendencies, is best left to the imagination.

Yet the cry has been much raised of late that we must do our share in the east and that Americans must have their part of eastern commerce. This is praiseworthy in every way, but how can it be brought about except by doing the work with the best tools and in the best way, when today the two most painstaking nations in the world, Germany and Japan, are doing everything in their power to establish themselves financially in China? This being so, it scarcely is to be believed that the sale of American goods is entrusted to foreigners in the Chinese cities. There is a certain ingenuous quality in such a proceeding that must command our respectful attention. We have no German departmental clerks at Washington in the state department, we have no foreign representatives at the deliberations of our cabinet, yet either would be about as wise as what our American commercial houses do in China. When we sell a foreign community half a dozen alarm clocks, we establish personal relations with each person that hears their stroke; when a corporation with which we have nothing to do loans by deputy some millions to a corporation that is virtually an abstraction to the people of the country where it is situated, relations, to be sure, are established, but are nevertheless, save to a very few, again but abstractions. A loan like this is of great importance; it must create diplomatic possibilities and international relations, but no matter how great it may be it can never do the work of continual trading between the individuals of two nations.

To foster such a state of things and to watch every development and growing need of China, we must have a body of men that are certain of their office without fear of removal, trained in the language and well accustomed to diplomatic usages and the rules of commerce. If we, for the sake of little policies at home and for fear for personal interests, are unwilling to maintain such a body to help our merchants and our bankers, we shall come very near to being ridiculous in the world's eyes as proclaiming the raw pride of inexperience.

THE manner in which some of the college boys of the country have been cutting up clearly shows that they deserve a calling down. All college men worthy of the name are interested in the matter of good manners to a degree that will demand a higher standard of student behavior. Of course only a relatively small number of the youths appear to be unable to distinguish between comparatively innocent mischief and downright meanness, but they are bringing a discredit on all the rest that should not be tolerated. College football is not the only thing in need of "reforming."

Ir may be that a possible reason has been discovered why the Wright brothers are not at present actively engaging in the contests for aviation prizes offered in various parts of the land. The rumor that they are planning to sue Glenn Curtiss and make him give them the $10,000 prize he won in flying from Albany to New York may make it appear that they deem it will be easier to get the rewards by legal processes than by flying for them.

A New York city youth, after attending a picture show which set forth a way in which a robbery was committed, tried with success the same method on a store the following night but was apprehended in giving away some of the stolen goods. It seems like a very short-sighted policy to permit picture shows and cheap theaters to teach on the inside what the police and society are trying to prevent on the outside.

THAT Sarah Bernhardt is to make still another farewell tour of America is pleasant news for all lovers of the drama in its best and highest form. Until there are a larger number of promising stars among the new lights of the stage it behooves the public to make all it can of the old-time popular favorites

THE outcome of the primaries in Iowa today will have deep interest not alone for politicians but for informed people everywhere, since it will indicate pretty clearly how the administration stands in the Republican states of the middle West. State politics in Iowa have so shaped themselves that the fight between Messrs. Carroll and Garst for the governorship nomination will decide whether the regular or the insurgent and, incidentally, whether the Taft or the Cummins influence is the more powerful.

Because Governor Carroll gave his adhesion to the national administration and accepted the friendship of the "stand pat" element, it became necessary for Senator Cummins and his followers to espouse the cause of Warren Garst, who aspires to Governor Carroll's place. On the Cummins side the supporters of the present state executive are called reactionaries, while the latter, styling themselves the only regular and loyal Republicans, are accusing the insurgents of attempting to disrupt and destroy the party.

In this connection the news telegraphed from Washington with regard to the heartiness of the popular greetings to President Taft on his return trip from the West has interest and significance. This revival of the enthusiasm with which he was wont to be received during his early days in the presidency is said to be attributable directly and entirely to the recent movement of the administration against the railroads. The returns from Iowa should show whether the apparent change of sentiment will operate to the advantage or disadvantage of the faction in the Republican party that may be credited with, or held responsible for, the vigorous proceedings recently taken by Mr. Wickersham with Mr. Taft's approval. Iowa may decide that the administration is radical enough, or it may decide that the best way to insure a continuance of what it regards as the administration's good work is to stand loyally by Senator Cummins, Senator Dolliver and the policies they advocate.

Plethora of Candidates An interesting situation is presented in the Republican party in Vermont, as well as in numerous other states. There certainly is no lack of Republican candidates for Governor, four being in the field at present, with talk of more to come. Those whose names have been announced are Frederick G. Fleetwood of Morrisville, a former secretary of state, whose campaign watchword is "retrenchment"; James K. Batchelder of Arlington, a former speaker of the Vermont House of Representatives, who stands principally on "state roads"; M. T. Hapgood of Peru, who advocates "conservation of the state's natural resources," and John A. Mead of Rutland, a scale manufacturer, who promises, if elected, to give the state a "business administration." Mr. Mead has made the most systematic campaign of any of the candidates, none of whom has yet been indorsed by the Republican state committee.

It should be understood that the United States senatorship enters into the question of indorsing a candidate and is looked upon as of more importance, all things considered, than the governorship. The state committee as at present organized is said to be favorably disposed toward the candidacy of former Gov. Fletcher D. Proctor for the Senate and will indorse no man who will not support him. It is possible the state convention may not be able to agree upon any one of the four gubernatorial candidates in the field, in which case the state committee is reported to have two "dark horses" favorable to Proctor, one of whom might be nominated at the last moment. The Republican convention is to be held at Montpelier on June 30. The Democrats meet at St. Albans on June 25, and Charles D. Watson is the only candidate for Governor thus far mentioned in that party.

The two men on whom the state committee bases its hopes of success, should a stampede movement be necessary, are Charles C. Gates of Franklin, a member of the state highway commission, and Olin Merrill of Enosburg. Former Governor Proctor is said to be eager for the honor of a place in the United States Senate, in which his father, Redmond Proctor, sat for many years. The outcome of the Republican convention will be awaited with unusual

CIVIC PRIDE has expressed itself in many ways during recent years, but seldom has it been able to boast with more substantial reason than Baltimore gives for the selfcongratulation in which it is indulging at present. It is happy as well as proud that its food supply is so plentiful and so cheap, and the American of that city, touching on the matter, attributes these blessings to the fact that Baltimore is located practically on the waters of Chesapeake bay, with its vast production of fish food, and to the numerous truck farms in the vicinity and their easy access to the city's markets. This leads the Picayune of New Orleans to present similar claims on the part of the Crescent city.

These cities, however, are not exceptionally situated or exceptionally fortunate with regard to the matter of local food supply. In the South, the West and the Northwest the local supply of foodstuff, generally speaking, is abundant, and at first hand cheap. The middleman is conveniently blamed for the advance which takes place between the time the foodstuff leaves the producer and the time it reaches the consumer. It is a question, however, whether the retailer is getting more than his legitimate share of the profits; it is a question, indeed, whether the profits in these days of high prices are so great as they were a few years ago when the price of everything in the nature of food was low.

Baltimore and New Orleans seem to reveal the secret when they find reason to boast of easy and cheap transportation for their water and garden products. For example, New York and Chicago have almost unlimited fish and vegetable-producing territory to draw upon, but in each case it costs almost as much to market the products as it does to catch or to raise them. In a majority of our big cities great central markets, reached quickly and cheaply underground or overground by the producer, and accessible to the great body of consumers, give assurance of the only effectual remedy for present
